Woman arrested for arson

EAST BOSTON. A Boston woman will be arraigned tomorrow on arson charges for allegedly setting fire to an East Boston home. Tina Farulla, 24, was arrested by police at the scene of the Saturday night fire. Three firefighters were treated for minor injuries battling the fire at 165 Coleridge St. The fire broke out just before 11 p.m. and caused $300,000 worth of damage, fire officials said. Officials did not say how Farulla is connected to the home, but the arson is being investigated as a domestic incident. METRO

Could anyone co-opt Occupy movement?

Experts suggest that as unions join, message may get muddy ◐ Conflicts could create controversy ◐ Occupy members welcome all to the movement

While union support has helped the Occupy Boston movement grow, with a handful of labor groups throwing their weight behind them, experts say the recognition could also muddle the group's message.

"If you really want a small protest to become a big movement you need bigger allies," said professor Peter Ubertaccio, director of the Joseph Martin Institute for Law & Society at Stonehill College. "On the other hand … when you bring in larger organizations you add an element of hierarchy that can dilute the message."

What Occupiers said:

"As unions continue to sign on to this protest we will have to figure out how to deal with some of the problematic internal politics."
@Kapitalism101

"I'm merely suggesting that we be vigilant to avoid being co-opted by either the left or the right, and any specific organization other than our own."
@cykros

On their side

- AFL-CIO
- Greater Boston Labor Council
- Ben & Jerry's
- National Association of Social Workers
- The Massachusetts Transgender Political Coalition
- 1199SEIU

In just one week, Occupy Boston has garnered support from the Mass. Nurses Association, the Greater Boston Labor Council and even a thumbs up from Ben & Jerry's ice cream.

But Ubertaccio said unions are known to raise money to go towards the political process.

"If a social movement wants to be against money in politics, then bringing into the fold groups well known for injecting money into politics, that can muddle the clarity of their message," he said.

Occupy member Gunner Scott is open to teamwork and said the group "welcomes all to this grassroots spontaneous movement."

A local college student was clinging to life yesterday after she was rescued by her friend from a fall in to the Charles River. The unidentified 18-year-old was out with friends early yesterday morning. The group was hanging out by the Boston University sailing pavilion about 1 a.m. when somehow the teen fell.

Crews rushed her to Brigham and Women's Hospital where she was later upgraded to stable condition. Authorities did not identify which school she attends, but state police said she is originally from Houston, Texas. METRO

▶ The family that runs together stays together ... in an RV built for two!

A family helps the Hub stay healthy in the long run

A family of eight that's running across the United States to educate people on the benefits of staying healthy made a stop in Boston this weekend.

Dr. Ed Chicoine and his family have been trading off running shifts, relay-style, putting in more than 50 miles a day, trekking through Canada and the U.S. It's the first time anyone has attempted to make such a journey by foot.

Having completed more than 5,000 miles in Canadian territory, the family stopped in Southie and rested in the Hub through Columbus Day weekend.

"[The world] has lots of disease and obesity, and we spend so much money treating a disease that can be prevented altogether without drugs or surgery," said Chicoine. "You don't need to rely on harmful chemicals, you just need to be more active."

Shacked up in an RV built for two, the family chugs along state to state with one person running to meet them at their next stop.

Then they switch.

"We put all our lives on hold," said Chicoine about his family.

Everywhere they stop, the Chicoine family spreads the word about health and wellness at schools, social events and meetings with city officials. Last week, they met with former Mayor Ray Flynn and City Councilor Bill Linehan.

Chicoine said being crammed in small quarters with his family can create cabin fever, but the daily runs keep everyone sane.

"We do, on average, a half marathon a day each," he said. "By the time we finish, we think we might average 100 marathons each."

Report shows part-timers seek full-time gigs

- National unemployment holds steady at 9.1 percent
- Number of 'involuntary part-time workers' rising

In a bad job market, you have to take work where you can find it. And for an increasing number of Americans, that means working part-time.

According to the new jobs report released at the weekend, unemployment held steady at 9.1 percent — about where it has been since April. But one key indicator went in the wrong direction.

"The number of persons employed part-time for economic reasons (sometimes referred to as involuntary part-time workers) rose to 9.3 million in September," the report said. "These individuals were working part-time because their hours had been cut back or because they were unable to find a full-time job."

www.metro.us
STAY WITH METRO ALL DAY. FOLLOW US ONLINE FOR MORE GREAT CONTENT

Other jobs data suggests the same trend. A Gallup poll released Thursday found that the percentage of workers who are part-time and seeking full-time work rose from 9.3 percent to 9.6 percent in the month of September. That's a modest bump, but it's part of a growing trend: A year ago, just 8.7 percent of Americans described themselves as such in another Gallup poll. More Americans are being forced to work part-time to make ends meet, and they're not happy about it.

"Gallup now finds more part-time workers seeking full-time work, suggesting that some workers are finding jobs but not the full-time positions they seek," reads the Gallup report.

While anyone can call themselves lucky to have a job in this economy, it's not hard to see why the part-timers are dissatisfied — they typically don't get full benefits and have to deal with multiple commutes if they take on multiple part-time jobs to pay the bills. While many of the 9.1 percent of Americans who are unemployed would gladly trade places with them, it doesn't necessarily mean that everything is hunky-dory for those with part-time work.

Protests reach into education

NEW YORK. College students across the country rose from their classroom desks on Oct. 5 and walked out the door. Known as Occupy Colleges, this movement showed students' solidarity with the Occupy Wall Street protesters.

After the walk-outs, students congregated on college greens from coast to coast to stage protests against corporate greed, high tuition and political corruption. Almost 2,500 people have "liked" the Occupy Colleges Facebook page. Now the movement is putting out another call to students for Thursday, Oct. 13.

The page encourages students to join one of many occupations taking place in cities across the nation including Los Angeles, Boston, Philadelphia and the largest in New York City. Rumors of a "World Wide Occupy" on Oct. 15 have begun circulating as well. METRO/CG

This year's college freshman have a lot of spending power, but they're more cautious with their money. They also have more free time than any other class before them, according to the 11th annual College Explorer survey powered by Crux Research.

"With more than a decade's worth of College Explorer data, we are able to track exactly how college life has changed for students in 2011," said John Geraci, president of Crux.

11.4 Daily hours of discretionary time for students.

This student body has $417 billion in spending power, a 14 percent increase from last year. However, the current class is also more careful with money. When it comes to tuition, there has been a decrease of 14 percent over the past 10 years. (Scholarships, financial aid or loans amounts have increased 15 percent.) The study also found that this student body is more apt to stretch a dollar.

There was one exception. According to the study, food spending actually increased by 39 percent from last year; students spend about half of their discretionary funds on food.

McCartney: From 'Love Me Do' to saying 'I do'

Paul McCartney tied the knot for the third time, marrying New Yorker Nancy Shevell in London on Sunday, according to the BBC. The couple exchanged vows at Old Marylebone Town Hall, where McCartney married his first wife, Linda, in 1969. Shevell wore an above-the-knee gown designed by McCartney's daughter, Stella, with McCartney's other daughter, Beatrice, serving as the flower girl. McCartney and Shevell then returned to his London home for a small reception. The ceremony and reception were noticeably more low-key than McCartney's marriage to Heather Mills, which ended in a very messy and very public divorce battle. "It's just close family, a few friends — we believe about 30 people — so far more intimate," sources say of the weekend's event. Barbara Walters, Ringo Starr and his wife Barbara Bach were among the few invited.

Talking points

A death in the Weezer family

Mikey Welsh, a former member of Weezer and painter in his own right, was found dead in a Chicago hotel room this weekend, of a suspected drug overdose. Welsh started playing music in Boston bands in the '90s and was the bass player for Weezer when the group first came out of hiatus at the turn of the century, playing on such hits as "Hash Pipe" and "Island in the Sun." He was reportedly in the Windy City to see his old band play. When Welsh spoke to Metro in 2003, he was just transitioning into his career as a painter. He spoke about an artist's duty to "exorcise the demons." "I don't think art is supposed to be pleasant and happy," he said. "It's a free-for-all." Welsh was 40 years old. He leaves behind a wife and two sons.

A Kabbalah reunion

Ashton Kutcher and Demi Moore appeared in public together for the first time since divorce rumors started plaguing them, according to People. The couple attended Friday night services at the Kabbalah Centre in L.A. While they sat on opposite sides of the aisle — as is customary at the Centre — they greeted each other with a hug afterward and left with their arms around each other's waists, according to onlookers.

Blake Lively moves on?

It looks like Blake Lively's recent visit with "Green Lantern" co-star Ryan Reynolds in Boston was a bit more than friendly. The "Gossip Girl" star, who recently split from Leonardo DiCaprio, was spending time with Reynolds while he was in the city filming a new movie, according to Hollywood Gossip. "When Ryan took Blake to catch her train back to NYC they were making out and looked really happy together," a source said. Apparently, Lively was at a recent Radiohead concert in New York that Reynolds attended with ex-wife Scarlett Johansson — though sources now say that he left with Lively instead, immediately boarding a train for Boston afterwards.

Negotiating your salary like an FBI agent

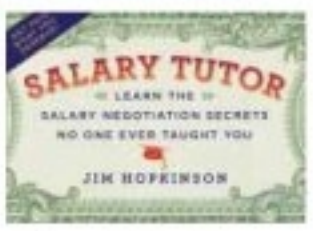
About to face off with a stingy HR department? Take some tips from deal-making pros Author Jim Hopkinson on how to start making more money

Whether you're in the process of accepting a new job or attempting to negotiate a raise at your current gig, asking for more money than what's on the table is inherently awkward. Plus, you're likely up against HR employees who have these talks all day, every day.

In his new book, "Salary Tutor," Jim Hopkinson compiles advice from a number of pros — most notably, the FBI. What works for law enforcement interrogators could work for you: paraphrasing and repeating phrases, asking open-ended questions, identifying emotional triggers in the opposing party and initiating pauses in conversation to coerce new information.

Then again, it could also turn into a weird "CSI: Miami" outtake. We checked in with Hopkinson about making it work in the real world.

More than $



Before you accept a number, what should you be considering?

The bottom line is that it's not always about the money. Does the job have a good work/life balance? How is the commute? Will you be working with a great boss and co-workers? Most importantly, are you doing something you love? You should always consider these factors when evaluating the overall offer.

Why do so many people dread salary negotiations?

Discussing salary is often a taboo subject with friends and colleagues, so people are underprepared because it's a skill that many people are never taught. Whereas an HR professional has the proper training and might negotiate salaries several times per week, you might only negotiate salary a few times in your career.

The FBI techniques sound great on paper, but actually inviting a silent period goes against most people's instincts. Do you have any advice on how to handle that pause?

It can definitely be awkward at first, so the key is to practice. I once spent eight straight hours preparing for this 30-second conversation. That might sound like a lot, but considering that your yearly salary is at stake, and that Americans spend about five hours a day watching TV and 53 billion minutes a month on Facebook, it is time well spent.

What about repeating information makes HR employees bend to your will?

The key is to show that you are actively listening and fully engaged. You show that you understand what is being offered, which ensures both parties that they are on the same page so that the negotiation can continue.

STOCKBYTE

▶ Be strong in your silent treatment! FBI negotiators leave pauses in their interrogations, which the other party tends to fill with small talk and valuable information.

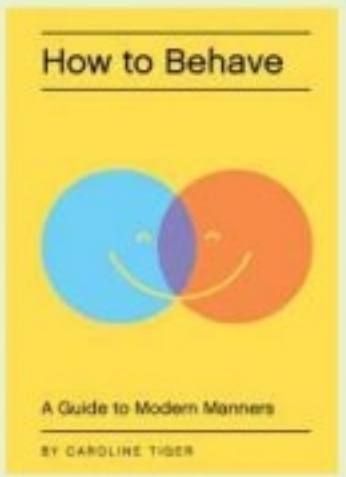
10 Ways to act like an adult with the office copy machine

METRO/MW

In her new book, "How to Behave," Caroline Tiger spells out the appropriate way to handle a wide range of everyday scenarios, from carrying an umbrella in the city to saying "I love you." While her playfully proper tone certainly contributes to the book's subtle humor, part of the fun is realizing just how ill-equipped we humans are at navigating the most mundane of tasks with the slightest bit of poise and class. Case in point: her photocopier etiquette rules, which we're excerpting here — and violate almost hourly.



1. Never leave the copier without first attending to a flashing icon, which usually indicates a paper jam or misfeed or the need for a new toner cartridge.
2. If you cannot resolve the copier's distress signal by yourself, notify your office manager or machine serviceperson immediately.
3. Never leave the copy machine empty of paper.
4. If you used color paper or letterhead or any type of paper besides white, remove it before leaving the machine so that others don't use it by mistake.
5. If you become frustrated with the copy machine, do not kick it, punch it or become violent toward it in any way.
6. Do not eat or drink around the photocopier.
7. Do not smudge the platen glass with your oily fingertips.
8. No matter how funny it looked in the movie, do not attempt to photocopy your own or another's body parts.
9. Little jobs trump big jobs. If you're making five copies of a 250-page report, you should interrupt the job to let in the person who needs to make a one-page copy.
10. Remove staples, sticky notes and paper clips from whatever you're going to copy.

▶ Going "Office Space" on the copier, although therapeutic, clearly violates rule No. 5.

Students look to serve — securely

Nonprofit and government gigs are high on the career wish lists of the so-called 'millenial' generation

DIGITAL VISION

▶ Millenials want secure careers and are more accepting of public-sector jobs.

According to the National Association of Colleges and Employers, millennial students increasingly value opportunities in government agencies and nonprofits. Its latest survey reports that 61 percent of all internships during the 2010-2011 school year were in those sectors.

College faculty members who replied to queries for this article reported that their current students are looking for safe-bet careers and trending away from the for-profit sector. "There's certainly a willingness to work for government amongst millennials," says Mike Hais, a former political pollster for the Democratic Party, and co-author of the new book, "Millennial Momentum: How a New Generation is Remaking America." "That's a big shift from proceeding generations. Boomers, to a considerable degree, were not comfortable in government. And Generation X was very anti-institutional.

But if you ask millennials what their ideal employer is, hi-tech is at the top — then it's the State Department, the CIA and Teach For America."

Does this point to a pragmatic millennial zeitgeist, or is it simply a natural response to a disastrous economy? The two might go hand in hand. "We've noticed more students coming in worried about their choice of major, career-wise," says Anthony Ciarleglio, director of cooperative education and internships at Western Connecticut University. "They're more accepting of the public sector, because they see a secure job there."

Pros and cons of the protest

Protesters gather to bring down the greedy capitalist but ignore how corrupt politicians manipulate the system. The fact is that employers can't employ people when government spending, borrowing and regulating takes profits from them and increases their labor costs. Senators will cut benefits in order to keep the bureaucracy. And, they will make these cuts as painful as possible to provoke street protests and cause job losses that justify new spending. Pray that our senators have the wisdom to reorganize government and repay the debt. If they fail, the next time we "Remember the poor when we vote," we'll be considering our own impoverished situation. MICHAEL MCCARTHY, VIA E-MAIL

These Wall Street protesters are a waste of time, space and money. They represent exactly what is wrong with America — the entitled masses who feel they are "owed" something. There is a new American dream; it is no longer work hard and get ahead — it's get as much as you can by doing as little as possible. Rule No. 1: Life is not fair. MICHAEL CHIMENTI, VIA E-MAIL

I am seeing the panicky right wingers crying "Communists." I see the politicians crying "We're sick of the protestors." We see the police trying their best to make Wall Street seem like Tiananmen Square by bullying the protestors. The one simple equation is that all the politicians, communist shouters and the power tier are really scared. OWS is an idea whose time has come. People are fed up with politicians who have their mouths in the corporate trough. This is America. This is free speech. This is democracy at its best. ROBERT C. YUKNAVECH, VIA E-MAIL

It is no secret anymore that last day's demonstrations "against capitalism" is just a well staged and well paid event. Almost all participants have no clue why they are there. ELENA BRIO, BROOKLINE

Remembering a rights icon

Two American icons passed away on Oct. 5. Steve Jobs is being widely celebrated. But deserving of equal attention is the Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth, a fearless leader in the civil rights movement. His contribution to the present cultural fabric of this country is vast. Mr. Jobs may have altered the manner in which we communicate, but Rev. Shuttlesworth helped change the way we treat each other. DAVID TERHUNE, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Be as cooperative as possible, even if the other guy isn't. People can be a bit touchy, so tactful handling of all your important relationships is essential.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Co-workers or helpmates could unintentionally cause problems for you. Thus, if it is at all feasible, do as much as you can on your own, rejecting all help.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. It's always important to be extremely selective in whom you place your trust, but it is vital that you plan wisely when finances are involved. A bum choice could be costly.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Stifle any disagreement that pops up between you and your mate as promptly as possible. If you don't, things could grow out of proportion and turn into a real fight.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. It's likely to be very difficult for you to quell your temper if someone should irritate you, so be on guard. A lack of control invites unpleasant confrontations aplenty.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Unless it can resolve something, don't point any fingers at others, claiming they are the ones at fault for messing up, even if you believe this to be true. Let the chips fall where they may.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Even if you recognize the shortcomings of another, you should keep them to yourself and exercise tolerance when dealing with that person. Acting too smart makes you look bad.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. There is a good chance you might have to deal with someone who is a taker. Should this person think you're an easy mark, prove him or her wrong.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Trying to force others to give you the support you think you deserve won't help anything. Instead of facilitating matters, it might only make them worse.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. It's one of those days when you think you can beat the odds and, consequently, won't hesitate to do something that goes against your better judgment. It'll be a bad mistake.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. You know it is never wise to involve yourself with friends where money or something of value is at stake, yet you are likely to do so anyway. Someone will get the short end of the stick.

Pats fly high vs. rival Jets

Suddenly solid Patriots 'D' grounds their archrivals ◗ Brady steps up after rare INT, even with Ochocinco failing to make noise again ◗ Can't argue with Green-Ellis' strong performance ◗ Tied with Bills atop East

PATRIOTS (4-1)	30
JETS (2-3)	21

GETTY IMAGES

▶ BenJarvus Green-Ellis had one of the best games of his career in the Patriots' win yesterday.

What went right ...

1 BJGE stars— It was BenJarvus Green-Ellis who got the Patriots on the board first, and it was Green-Ellis who sealed the deal for the Pats in the end with some big rushes to run out the clock. All in all, Benny rushed for 136 yards and two touchdowns — a fine day, especially when combined with Tom Brady's showing.

2 There's that 'D' — The Jets aren't really a great measuring stick, but you can't do too much complaining about the Pats defense this week. New York was held to three-and-out seven times in the game.

What went wrong ...

1 Coulda, shoulda, woulda — Tom Brady targeted Aaron Hernandez nine times on Sunday, but one of those targets — what should have been a sure TD — ended up being a Jets interception. Brady's pass to Hernandez in the closing seconds of the first half would have given them a 17-3 lead, but instead kept the Jets in it going into the second half.

2 No-show Cinco again this week — Out of all Brady's receivers, Chad Ochocinco was targeted the least — just three times. He made two catches (23 yards) in the second quarter, and was never heard from again. On a day when many thought Wes Welker might be shut down, it was Ochocinco who didn't make any noise — once again.

Steelers QB Ben Roethlisberger had an oddly prolific day in the Steelers' 38-17 win against the Titans yesterday. "Big Ben" threw for just 228 yards — mediocre by this year's inflated standards. But five of his 24 completions went for touchdowns.

Rare red-zone pick can't pull Brady down

QB turns in a strong day despite a first-half foible by pass-catcher He did everything the Patriots needed

Closing in on 20 straight

The Patriots won their 19th straight regular-season game at Gillette Stadium yesterday.

- That's a team record for consecutive home wins in the regular season. The previous best was 18 in a row from Dec. 29, 2002, to Sept. 8, 2005.
- The Pats have the NFL's highest winning percentage at a stadium since 1970. They've won 62 of 74 games all-time at the Razor. The Dolphins are second-best, with a record of 101-22-1 at the Orange Bowl.

It was about the rarest of events for the Patriots.

First-and-10, 14 seconds on the first-half clock, Tom Brady commanding the offense in the red zone.

He dropped back, found his man ... and saw the ball end up in the hands of a defender.

Antonio Cromartie's pick of a Brady pass off Aaron Hernandez's hands was the first time the QB has ever been intercepted in the red zone at home.

On the air Sunday

Patriots vs. Cowboys
4:15 p.m., FOX, 98.5 FM

72.7

Brady posted a 72.7 QB rating against the Jets yesterday. He came into the game with a 111.3 score on the year thanks to his early gaudy numbers.

The half was over, and what should have been a sure scoring opportunity had ended up in disaster.

Some passers would have folded shop then. Many more would have tuned out mentally after Deion Branch's apparent fumble on the 2-yard-line after a desperation throw during New England's next drive.

Not Brady. Moments after the fumble call was reversed, the QB went right back to Branch for a short score. He kept right on throwing, too, totaling 321 yards on 24-for-33 passing.

In all, it represented a nice closing act for Brady, whose so-so first half featured three sacks and the interception.

Next week's foe, Dallas, held Matthew Stafford to 240 passing yards last week. METRO

Raiders win one for Davis

"Anderson Silva, you absolutely suck."

HOUSTON. Top UFC middleweight Chael Sonnen made two statements Saturday night at UFC 136. First, he easily submitted Brian Stann in their middleweight fight. Buffalo again shows it's real with victory

Bills, Patriots locked atop AFC East after dual wins ◆ Both knocked off solid teams in green yesterday ◆ It's a real throwback upstate these days

Fans sporting Jim Kelly jerseys. An appearance by Thurman Thomas.

Now, add a 4-1 start.

The Buffalo Bills are really turning back the clock these days at Ralph Wilson Stadium.

Following yesterday's 31-24 victory over the Eagles, Buffalo is tied with the Patriots atop the AFC East. As if that wasn't shocking enough, the team isn't just doing it with smoke and mirrors.

The Bills actually look like a force.

"It's still early. We still have a lot of work to do to get where we want to be. We're happy where we are right now, but we're not going to settle," said Fred Jackson, who ran for 111 yards against Philadelphia.

As the clock hit all zeroes, in a rare role reversal, it was the Buffalo fans taunting the Philly fans heading for the exits. The home-field advantage is back in western New York.

"You look around and there's no seats open," wide receiver Naaman Roosevelt said. "It's definitely good that the fans are enjoying it."

Season's over for Eagles back Harris, DT Ramsey

There's always next year on the Heights BC loses another game and plans to seek waivers for contributors Would let them play next season

The Boston College football team lost another game Saturday. And the Eagles might have given up the ghost in their chase for a 13th consecutive bowl appearance.

After this weekend's 36-14 loss at No. 8 Clemson, BC is 1-5 — meaning they'd need to win five of their remaining six games to reach bowl eligibility. That's a tough enough task ... and it will be even tougher without running back Montel Harris and defensive tackle Kaleb Ramsey, both of whom were declared done for the season yesterday.

BC is applying for medical hardship waivers for both injury-plagued seniors. The waivers — which would grant a fifth year of eligibility — are available to players who suffer season-ending injuries after appearing in fewer than 30 percent of their team's games (none after the season's midway point).

"Both have expressed a desire to return for an additional year," coach Frank Spaziani said. "We will begin the process immediately. This will enable Montel and Kaleb to concentrate on healing from their injuries." METRO
